

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY IN THEOLOGY OF DEVELOPMENT

PROGRAM GUIDE

The Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) in Theology of Development is an advanced research program that marries Evangelical theology with cutting-edge development scholarship. Doctoral seminars probe Scripture, Christian history, and theology alongside contemporary debates in sustainable development and social entrepreneurship. This interdisciplinary coursework equips candidates to forge a robust, biblically grounded framework for holistic transformation.

Doctoral candidates cultivate high-level competencies in ethical research, leading to a dissertation that advances knowledge at the intersection of theology and development practice. Graduates emerge as scholar-practitioners and thought leaders ready to guide churches, NGOs, and other organizations toward Christ-centered solutions that yield lasting impact and faithfully advance the mission of the Gospel.
